

Atlas Copco's Capital Markets Day 2018: Adding customer value through leading innovation

Stockholm, Sweden, November 15, 2018: Atlas Copco hosts its annual Capital Markets Day for investors and financial journalists today. The purpose of the event is to give an update on the strategy and development of the Atlas Copco Group and its worldwide operations.

The day will give participants a more in-depth understanding of the Group's overall activities and each of the four business areas will be presenting.

"We will demonstrate innovations that enable our customers to continue to create value through increased efficiency, energy-saving and connectivity," said Mats Rahmström, President and CEO of the Atlas Copco Group. "Going forward, after the successful spin-off of Epiroc, we have a solid foundation for continuous growth and an even stronger focus on industrial customers".

The Capital Markets Day includes presentations by all four Business area Presidents. The Group President and CEO, Mats Rahmström, supported by members of the Group Management team, will explain Group strategy, the focus areas and company goals. The program also includes a tour of innovations showing how we create value for customers.

Mats Rahmström confirms Atlas Copco's most recent outlook statement, that customer demand is expected to be somewhat lower, mainly due to the semiconductor and automotive industries.
