

Atlas Copco has acquired an Italian distributor of compressed air equipment and related services

Nacka, Sweden, January 26, 2021: Atlas Copco has acquired DGM SRL (DGM), an Italian distributor of compressed air equipment and related services. The company's customers are mainly industrial companies active in the Veneto region in the north-east of Italy.

DGM is a privately owned company and has 21 employees. The company is located in the city of Vicenza.

“DGM has built up a loyal customer base in their targeted market”, said Vagner Rego, Business Area President Compressor Technique. “Through this acquisition we will get the opportunity to increase our service and sales presence in the important industrial region of Veneto.”

The purchase price is not material relative to Atlas Copco's market capitalization and is not disclosed.

The company will become part of the service division within the Compressor Technique Business Area.
